In the latter case the D H Ry can be used to Ghoom one march thence via Peshoke to Teesta Bridge where the same road to Gangtok is met; (2) the other route is via the Jelapa (Pass). After leaving Teesta Bridge, 2 miles further on the Giellekhola branches off, by following this, through Kalimpong the Jelapa is reached. This offers the same alternative as the first route with regard to reaching Teesta Bridge. It is impossible to say which transport can be used; carts can frequently be got upto Gangtok to reach Yarcola; the road is continually being swept by the Teesta or breached by rain, when only mules or coolies can go. Beyond Gangtok mules or coolies only are available. This road during the rains is subject to slips, but animal transport can usually proceed; in winter there are frequent slips and the track may become obliterated by snow; animal transport often cannot proceed, but anyone determined to do so could do so with coolies; there is, however, a risk of avalanches. The dak is not, as a rule, stopped for many days at a time, but there are a certain number of casualties amongst the Thibetan runners from avalanches and frost-bite.
